Despite being a little unprepared for the weekend at MUNA in August, the three students who spoke to us on Thursday evening were very positive about the experience. Will and Lara from St Peters College represented Saudi Arabia and Jasmine was a member of the team from BBHS representing Iran. They spoke about the power and the history of debating at Old Parliament House, the fun of dressing up, the making of new friends from all over Australia and the evenings spent writing and re-writing speeches. Both schools had the difficult task of the Middle Eastern politics and were unprepared for the complex resolutions. However, they enjoyed the challenge and we wish them all the best for Year 12.

Matilda Knight, our outgoing Youth Exchange Student, was originally bound for Quebec, Canada but circumstances have changed and now she will be leaving for Austria on 19 January 2019. Austria was her first choice so she is happy. It does mean though that after trying to learn French for Quebec she is now busy learning German. We wish her well and look forward to hearing of her adventures next year.

We meet at the Soldiers Club 6 for 6.30pm on Thursday.

POLIO by Pippa Kay

When we were kids a monster came to play.
Its slobber slimed our toys, it swam at our beach uninvited; splashed us and ran away;
hid in our homes, always just out of reach.
Hands over ears couldn't stop its snigger as it crept under beds, slept on the floor.
It wasn't scared of us. It was bigger stronger and worse than anything before.
It shared our breath and caught the goodnight kiss mothers blew from lips to land on our cheeks.
Chance chose its victims. It was hit and miss slaughter.

This killer stalked our town for weeks in nineteen-fifty-three. Our legs were chained, voices frozen. Some children couldn't walk. Some couldn't breathe. Infants were constrained in iron lungs. Many died before Salk's vaccine arrived.

With open arms and doors
We asked the virus vanquisher to stay.
We rolled up our sleeves, took the jab, because
We wanted this monster to go away
